Folger Genealogy

by

Virginiarose Folger Rust

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY
THE CITY OF BOSTON

Dear Family,

I am extremely proud to be a 10th generation descendant from Peter Folger. Working on this Genealogy has been a pleasure, but it would have been impossible had it not been for the guidance, assistance, and information given to us by a 9th generation descendant of Peter Folger, whom we all know and loved as Aunt Estella (Estella (9) Walter (8) Franklin (7) etc.).

Thank you all, for being so patient, while I have endeavored to compile the data contained herein.

As you can see, there are blank spots in this genealogy, but they are impossible for me to fill in, for I have been unable to obtain further information concerning them.

If I have committed some grave omissions, I would greatly appreciate your supplying me with the needed information, for believe me, any omissions have been unintentional.

Since this is the FOLGER GENEALOGY, I have only carried on the descendants of the sons (and not the daughters) thereby continuing the name of Folger.

I have included a [illegible] (Family Record). If your name is (or was before marriage) Folger, will you, at your convenience, please complete the sheet, and return to me. If you wish more sheets, I shall be glad to send them to you.

If any of you do not already belong to the Mayflower Society, and wish to do so, I have included the line, which you will need.

1401536

May God bless you all.

Sincerely,

Virginiarose Folger Rust

The Folgers trace their ancestry back many centuries to Holland where their forefathers were driven from there to England at the time the warning industry was introduced there, the descent is traced to John, who was born in 1507 in Norfolk county. In 1635, John, in company with his son, Peter, came to Massachusetts Bay colony and settled at Watertown, now Boston. Peter married Mary Morrill in 1645. They came over on the same boat with them and had been the indentured servant of the Rev. Hugh Peters. [illegible] subsequently returned to England where he [illegible] to Oliver Cromwell, being put to death when [illegible]

Continuing with the Folger ancestry, Peter and Mary were the parents of nine children, [illegible] whom was the great grandfather of [illegible]

The Folgers continued in Boston [illegible] on Nantucket Island for nearly 200 years, [illegible] the destruction of their fleets by the British in the [illegible] of 1812, members of the family moved to various parts of the country, namely North and South [illegible] Louisiana.

[illegible] the direct line of [illegible] Peter Folger, of early Puritan fame, and both [illegible] Folger Irons, passenger aboard the Mayflower in 1620.

[illegible] Folger Line from William the Conqueror, and also in a straight line from King Edward I.

(Compiled by Mr. Coleman Polgar of Nantucket, a [illegible] member of the N.E. Historical Genealogical Society.)

John Polgar, and his son Peter (the name was frequently written Paulgar) were said to have crossed the Atlantic in the same ship with Hugh from Norwich, in the county of Norfolk, England. Peter was about 18 years old. They settled in Watertown, Massachusetts. It is probable that John and Peter Polgar accompanied Thomas Mayhew, Jr. to Martin's Vineyard in 1641 or 42. John owned a house, upland, commonage and meadowland at the Vineyard. John died about 1660, leaving a widow Mardiell (Gibbs) Polgar, who was probably not Peter's mother as John was supposed to be a widower when he came over from England.

Peter married a maiden [illegible] of Irish lineage, who had come over on the same ship, whose name was Mary Mardill. They were married in [illegible].

While in Martin's Vineyard, Peter [illegible] and also practiced as a surveyor of land. He also assisted Thomas Mayhew in his work of Christianizing the Indians. It is also stated that when Thomas Mayhew, Jr. was lost in 1657 he left the care of his church to Peter Folger. Peter became a Baptist in his sentiments.

Peter learned the Indian language and first came to Nantucket as an interpreter. On July 4, 1663, the proprietors of Nantucket granted him half a share of land on Nantucket or half as much as each of the twenty purchasers, provided he would inhabit the island with his family and attend the English in the way of an interpreter. He accepted the grant.

On July 21, 1673, he became clerk of the courts. In his post [illegible] Peter Folger [illegible] an advocate for religious liberty and strongly condemns the persecuting spirit exhibited in New England in his day.

Benjamin Franklin, finding no coat of arms for the Folgers at the Herald's office, concluded that they were a Flemish family who went to England in the time of Queen Elizabeth I.

Savage, in his Genealogical Dictionary, calls Peter Folger, the first of the name to be connected with Nantucket, says that he came from Norwich, County Norfolk, England, in 1635, went early from Watertown to Martha's Vineyard, probably with Thomas Mayhew. He honored great pains in teaching the Indians, as successor to Mayhew, and removed about 1663, to Nantucket, where his name has ever since been in high regard.

Nathaniel Bannay says: "Peter Folger, of whom Cotton Mather speaks "as a pious and learned Englishman" has been named as the interpreter for Tristram Coffin Senior when he first visited Nantucket. He was the only child of John Folger, whose wife was Dorothy Gibbs, and came from Norfolk, England, a widower, in 1634, having his residence at some time thereafter at Martha's Vineyard.

Peter Folger's homelot was on the road ascending from Main Street west, and about two miles from the Upper Square. It may be easily identified by a monument erected on the site by the Daughters of the American Revolution, in honor of his daughter, Abiah, the mother of Benjamin Franklin.

Peter Folger married Mary Morrill, in 1644. Mary Morrill was a maid servant of Hugh Peters, a chaplain of Oliver Cromwell's. Their children were two sons, and seven daughters.

Peter Folger was one of the twenty original proprietors of Nantucket. Tristram Coffin, who planned the negotiations for the purchase of the island, took Peter Folger with him when he first went to Nantucket. Folger had lived on Martha's Vineyard, and was one of the few men who had taken the trouble to acquaint himself with the Indian dialects to be acted as interpreter. In all of the histories of Nantucket, Peter Folger is described as a man of great genius and versatility. He was the miller, the clerk of the court, the keeper of the town records, and was by all odds the best educated man on the island. He was also a liberal and sided with another of the proprietors who bitterly opposed Tristram Coffin in an argument that lasted for many years. Coffin was described as an aristocrat.

* Norwich seems to be two spellings (or former typographical errors) Norwich and Norwick. The former is probably correct.

Illustrative of one of the results of the intermarriage [illegible] the Islanders is a little story of Prof. Maria Mitchell told by Mrs. Hinchman in her "Early Settlers of Nantucket" [p.14]. When connected with Vassar College, someone said to her, "Miss Mitchell, I met a cousin of yours the other day." "Indeed!" was the natural question, "on Nantucket" was the appropriate reply. Miss Mitchell quickly said, "Oh, very likely; I have five thousand cousins on Nantucket." At that time that was the Island's population. Similarly Rev. Dr. Ferdinand C. Ewer humorously once said: "I found that my problems about me chemically composed of the following old Nantucket elements, for every one of which I am humbly grateful, viz--Hydrate of MOOR, 2per cent; Bicarbonate of [illegible], 2 per cent; Chloride of SWAIN, 3 per cent; Nitrate of MORRY, 3 per cent; Chloride of CARTWRIGHT, 11 per cent; Sulphate of [illegible], 11 per cent; Hydrate Sulphuric Acid of [illegible], 11 per cent; [illegible] of COFFIN, 12 per cent; Hydrate Bentonide of [illegible], 15 per cent; Amate of FOLGER, 20 per cent, traces of TOWNE, HALL, [illegible], 1 per cent; total 100 per cent."Godey's Hand Book pp 105-6.

The HALLS and RUSSELLS, coopers are,

The [illegible],

A lying COLEMAN very rare,

And scarce a learned RUSSELL.

The COFFINS noisy, fractious, loud,

The silent GARDNERS plodding,

The MITCHELLS good, the BARNARDS proud,

The MUDS and the pudding.

The SWAINS are swinish, clownish called,

The BARNARDS very civil,

The STARBUCKS they are loud to bawl,

The PINKHAMS beat the devil.

"PICK 'EM CLEAN"

After the showers and sprinkling rain,
Strawberry time is here again.
Father and Uncle and Mary and Ned
Know where the red-ripe berries grow.
Over the bridge and past the mill,
Across the brook and up the hill,
They hurry down the shady lane,
For strawberry time is here again.
The four little boys are always glad
When they can go their Uncle's aid
Over the gate that leads the way
Down past the barn and middle of hay,
Out to the patch where Uncle said
The vines are green where the berries grew.

"Look here, boys; please don't forget
The biggest berries you can get
Are hidden here, not fully seen,
So, watch for vines and pick 'em clean.
Fill the baskets according will,
Touch 'em lightly when you pick
The ripest ones--they're left for you,
Sparkling in the morning dew.
I'll say they're the best you've ever seen;
Now, pick 'em clean, boys, pick 'em clean."

The long since has gone to rest,
Leaving the boys his life has blest.
Look o'er the hills and far away
The four little boys of yesterday
Have gone where various paths have led
Far from the patch where Uncle said,
"These are the best you've ever seen,
So, pick 'em clean, boys, pick 'em clean."
